

There are many people who take methadone who also have hepatitis C (HCV for short). If you have HCV you can be treated with HCV medicines. Talk to your doctor.

Methadone and HCV Treatment

There are different combinations of drugs used to treat HCV that are taken together.

Your doctor will tell you when to take these drugs and if you need to take it with food.

The medicines used to treat HCV can have some side effects. The good news is that most of these side effects can be taken care of by working closely with a doctor or nurse. The other good news is that up to 100% of people who take HCV medications can be cured.

REMEMBER

- Talk to your doctor or nurse about ways to stay healthy.
- Talk to your doctor or nurse about hepatitis C treatment.
- People with HCV who are also taking methadone can be treated for their HCV.

Get Tested. Get Treated. Get Cured.

www.hcvadvocate.org

by Alan Franciscus

June 2018