

EASY C FACTS

One of the best things you can do to become healthy is to eat a well-balanced diet that contains plenty of fresh fruit, vegetables, and some lean meat. Most people with hepatitis C (HCV or Hep C for short) do not need a special diet until the liver is so damaged that it can not function well. If possible see a nutritionist (diet specialist) for advice on what to eat to stay healthy.

Healthy Eating

A diet based on ChooseMyPlate.gov is the best choice.

REMEMBER

- Do eat lots of fruits and vegetables as well as chicken, fish and some lean red meat. It is also good to eat cereals, bread, rice and pasta that are labeled as multigrain.
- Do not eat any raw or undercooked shellfish because they could damage your liver even more.
- Try to stay away from most foods that are high in fat, sugar, and salt. If possible stay away from fried or over-processed food that you can get from fast food restaurants.
- Visit www.choosemyplate.gov for more detailed information on eating well.

Get Tested.
Get Treated.
Get Cured.

www.hcvadvocate.org

 HEPATITIS C SUPPORT PROJECT

by Alan Franciscus

April/2016